(from the translator, Manchurian Editor)

The original road is in Changsha, Hunan province (It's quite a big city in south china), it's been called duoluo jie "vice road" since 1994. This street has lots of small restaurants, hotels, internet cafes, karaoke bars,and lots of university students live here.

In 1998 a journalist for the China Youth Daily* newspaper wrote an article on this matter and made various fake accusations. There was an investigation into the matter, and eventually the journalist was sacked, whilst the newspaper made an apology to the university students.
However the name and its notoriety stuck with the place.

Although this road held many fond memories to the number of students who lived here, the local government decided that in 2008 that the road will be dismantled for its plan to "beautify" the city.

The pictures drawn in this specific chapter, were taken from actual photos provided by the students just before the road was dismantled.

*T/N: Just for that, I think this (toilet) paper should be dismantled too...Anyway, this newspaper is run by the youth league in China, and I tend to think it's quite similar to People's Newspaper (Renmin Ribao) IF you want to read more about this go here

Most people join this whilst they're in middle school, by joining this org. it allows you to eventually join the proper communist party after university. Teachers tend to "suggest" students to join this, especially the high achievers...and if you don't join...well, they'll probably make you join...it doesn't do that much, other than give you a "political education". So, yeah...politics is crazy in China, oh and as for myself, I actually prefer left wing parties in politics, but trust me I'm not a communist, but just because some of you readers may support right wing parties, doesn't me I'll call you a fascist either. We've all got our own opinions.
